

Although you want a website, you must know that you should actively involve in its making. I make the webdesign and the promotion (including all the details entailing those), while you provide the content.

No site is like another, that's why it's rather difficult to make a generic price. We should have a detailed discussion concerning site's content and functionality.

An exact price can be made only after you, as client, have a clear image about how it should look and what it should do, and, after you give me all the materials that should be published on the website, (I accept texts, images etc. only in the digital format). The payment is made in two phases: half after I am given the last materials, before beginning to actually make the website, and the other half - after making it. In case of major modifications, or changing mind upon the initial agreement, the total cost is recalculated, depending the supplemental work involved by these changes.

We can easily collaborate over the internet via Yahoo!Messenger or Skype (also see my contact page).
